

Microtubules: What are microfilaments and protofilaments? What is the difference between them?

Microfilament is another name for a filament of F-actin. It has nothing to do with microtubules. Protofilaments describe the "sticks" that form a circle to make a microtubule.

Unique solution ID: #1364

Author:

Last update: 2007-04-30 00:32